The woman left Johnson with Gofaden and rejoined the other two, and all hid themselves as Johnson and Gofaden came up to where they were. They ponced upon him, felled him to the ground acd then dragged him into libilities rum shop, where Punhansing cut his threat. They then went to John Aller's house and sianghtered Kunslie, his wife, and Paternia, his mother, whose todies Johnson out up in a frightful manner. The bedies were left the NORFOLK AND WASHINGTON STEAM. quantly discovered, with the little girl of Aller sitting between them, covered with the blood of her mother and grandmother. The lives of the two women were forfeited simply because they recognized Johnson when he called John Aller out of his house and the murderets thought that they would testify to this fact. The reason why the taby was not included in the signghter seems to have been because it could not talk, although the woman distinctiy declared that it, 100, should be disposed of with its mother and grandmother. Rob-Johnson emerged from his cell first, chatted cheerfully for a few seconds and then walk-ed up and down in front of the cells, apparently praying. Then Punhasicg came out of his cell, and sitting down by the side of the wall rested his head in his hands. At twenty minutes to siven the woman, Agnes Hire, commenced to wall and cry, and did not cease until the arrival of the clergy. Ilbillic was banged first. Agnes called upon God to witness that she knew nothing of the orime, and her husband had scarcely finished a similar declaration when the drop fell. Agnes died instantly, but I billic struggled terribly for two minutes. After Ibillio had been out down Pachansing and Johnson mounted the scaffold and fell together. About half a century ago metallurgical students declared that, ancient as rustal weapons might be, cast from was a distinctively modern product. Tois, as far as Europe is concarned, may be true, cast iron statistics going back no farther than the latter part of the fourteenth century. After prolonged study the late Dr. Gunia, of Bonn, concluded that cast iron is a child of the dim past. In Obina wrought iron and steel were known 8000 B. C., and cast iron about 400 B. C. A Ob!nese author described the process at length. In the first contury of the Christian era s Obluese ravine, 1,000 feet deep, was spanned by a compressed bridge with cast iron col-umns. Cast iron is mentioned by Aristotle and Pliny. The Greeks and Ecmans do not seem to have used it extensively, judging from the fact that, while wrought from relics are common, cast from relics are rare. Dr. Gurit is none the less convinced that investigation will disclose many more such relica He described a little statue, representing a priestess of Isis, or the geddess Isis hereelf, which he supposes to have been made by an Egyptian orafisman for under Graco-Roman influence.
